PRESS RELEASE
YEAR XXIX – n 18
23 November 2013

PAOLO WAS TREATED LIKE RUBBISH FOR RECYCLING XX ANNIVERSARY OF THE EXPLANT OF PAOLO MONDO

This is my son. He was 19 years old when I was deceived into signing for the donation of his organs. “Paolo is dead” they said. Later I found out that he wasn’t dead. He was alive because pulsating organs are needed for transplants.

Paolo, who grew in my womb, whose birth was a joyful enterprise, who suckled at my breast, who was a trained dancer and was raised to appreciate the aesthetics of life, Paolo was downgraded into a lifeless container of spare parts.

The transplant-explant surgeons should have looked after him but instead they considered him to be no more than rubbish to be recycled.

No-one would donate organs if the truth were told, and they know this only too well.

I will not forgive them! These evil institutionalised “doctors” had the nerve to write to me “that a team of psychologists and psychiatrists is on hand to provide psychological assistance...the Specialized Assistance Centre for the families of organ donors is available to resolve any problems which may arise and to gather suggestions related to improving the organ transplanting initiative”. Their cruelty is both shameless and provocative.

They believe that maternal sentiment is abnormal. They think that sentiment should be wiped off the face of the earth as if it were a disease, so creating a dehumanized society functional to their profits.

I will never find peace.
